

The Arabic language courses

Arabic language occupies the fourth place among the most widespread languages, and it is spoken by residents in about 66 countries in the world, including all Arab countries, and the number of speakers is estimated by about 6.6% of the world's population, and it became an officially approved language in the United Nations in 1974.

Because of the migration of many Arabs as a result of the war to the Netherlands and other countries, there was a need to learn this language by some local residents in order to be able to communicate with the Arabic people and reach common points.

This is where the idea of learning the Arabic language come from. That is why, last year we started a course in Arabic language which six people participated in, they wanted to learn this language and use it as an additional language to communicate with their Arabic friends or even their clients.

The first course included identifying the letters of the Arabic language in terms of writing and pronunciation with learning Some of the terms that is used in this language. As the course participants showed great interest in this language, which prompted us to open the second course, where the participants learned how to say hello, identify themselves and make short conversations. They also became able to read some simple words and they have got the ability to analyze these words and know the letters that make them up. Now we have started the third course, which four people joined it, who still have the incentive to master this language, which is one of the most difficult languages in the world.

In this course, participants will learn how to ask and answer questions in addition to Lots of new vocabulary by reading selected short texts to expand their vocabulary with some written and verbal rules. Arabic is a language rich in vocabulary, which may make learning it a challenge for some people, but the love and enjoyment of this language is enough incentive to learn it, and this is what keeps the students going in these courses and try to master this language.
